NEPQ Phase 7 — Presentation

Cheat sheet · 5 Nov 2026 · for later

Purpose

Show your offer briefly, built entirely around the problems they told you about, then move to a clear next step. All the earlier phases did the heavy lifting; the pitch just connects the dots.

The rules

Rule	Why
Say the price up front	Sets clear expectations; the talk moves to value, not haggling
Keep it to 15% of the call or less	They've done most of the talking; keep it that way
2 to 4 pillars, each tied to one of their problems	Easy to follow; they see exactly how it fits them
Use their words, not your features	Shows you listened, and feels made for them
Check in after each pillar	Small yeses build towards the final yes

The structure

Step	What you say
1. Price	"It's [price] a month, and here's what that covers."
2. Pillar	"You said [their problem]. This [part of offer] means [their ideal fix]."
3. Check in	"Does that feel like it would solve it?"
4. Repeat	Next pillar, next problem (2 to 4 in total).
5. Confirm	"Out of all that, what stands out most for you?"
6. Next step	Explain exactly what happens next: payment, setup, start date.

Applied to TRB: parked for now

Not until your 20 conversations are done and 3 to 5 owners have said "yes, I'd try it" to the same pain. Until then there is nothing to present, and a pitch would spoil your discovery data.

How your CRM builds the pitch for you

Pitch part	Where it comes from
The problems (pillars)	Your top theme in the Pains tab, with their exact quotes
The ideal fix per pillar	The "What the ideal fix needs" box under that theme
Price anchor	"What they use now" and its cost
Check-in wording	The words they used for the ideal fix

Template for when you get there

"It's £[price] a month, no contract. There are three parts to it, each built around what you told me:"

• "You said [pain 1, their words]. [Part 1] means [their ideal fix]. Does that sound right?"

• "You also mentioned [pain 2]. [Part 2] takes care of that by [result]. Would that help?"

• "And [pain 3]. [Part 3] means [result]. Make sense?"

"Which of those matters most to you?" Then: "The next step is a setup session, in person or on video. When suits you this week?"

Honesty check: only promise what the product does today. No results claims you can't back up yet; your first gyms are your case studies.

Self-check after each pitch

☐ Did I give the price up front?

☐ Was my talking 15% of the call or less?

☐ Did every pillar match a problem they gave me?

☐ Did I get a yes after each pillar?

☐ Did I end with a clear, booked next step?
